"Here's an excerpt..."

Digital technology and the internet have literally transformed the way business is conducted. From every day communication to global manufacturing, such technologies have enabled completely digital workflows and enhanced the speed and frequency of business transactions, thereby increasing productivity and reducing costs. Yet when it comes to color, the efficiency of a digital workflow has fallen short. Cost, complexity and technological limitations of color matching and communication have undermined the reliability of a digital color workflow.

This paper discusses several new technological innovations in color matching that are enabling a reliable digital workflow and bringing about hastened speed to market, simplified workflow and as a result, have made the implementation of color a more profitable venture for driving business.
